Where Home & Work Meet

“Empowering women to take a more active role in the economy will enable them to be economically independent as individuals. This will automatically help to lower poverty levels in a country, especially if (they) are able to participate in the economy.”

Datuk Seri Abdullah Ahmad Badawi, Prime Minister of Malaysia, speaking at the Organisation of the Islamic Conference in December 2004

Salaam Wanita: Make Us Your Preferred Choice

Ever wondered what differentiates a good company from an outstanding company? It's not the profits or the Return on Investments or even the bottom line.

It's about building bridges with the community. It's about putting a friendly face to the business. It's about coming forward and making a difference just because you can and because you care.

John D. Rockefeller did it. John Walton, the Wal-Mart heir, did it. Malaysian property tycoon, Loke Yew did it. Bill Gates of Microsoft does it.

Show a little heart; show a little concern – these are the things that will make you and your company remembered for years to come. All it takes is a little effort on your part. You can either buy products hand-made by some very special women, or you can secure the services of these women in areas such as typing and translation.

What we suggest is not unlike the community-building activities that are part of your corporate social responsibilities.

Help Salaam Wanita, make Malaysia a better place to live in.

The Women at Salaam Wanita

Salaam Wanita is a project of the eHomemakers network (www.ehomemakers.net). It was initiated in 2002 to address the needs of low-income and unemployed special women – among them the disabled, single mothers, women with disabled dependants, and those with chronic illnesses. These women have little choice but to stay home.

The project equips them with Information and Communications Technology (ICT) and entrepreneurial skills so that they can stand on their own two feet. Today, our members take great pride in their ability to be economically self-reliant.

However, they can't do this on their own. They need the support of the community and the corporations.

They are not asking for handouts, or pity. All they ask for is a chance to live in dignity.

Products and Services

Our members offer the following products and services:

Eco-Baskets

Eye-catching and extremely versatile, these hand-made eco-baskets are woven from used magazines. They are environmentally-friendly as well as highly durable.

The baskets come in various sizes, shapes and colours and are ideal for hampers, souvenirs, door-gifts at corporate functions, or as packaging for gifts.
